Chapter 1

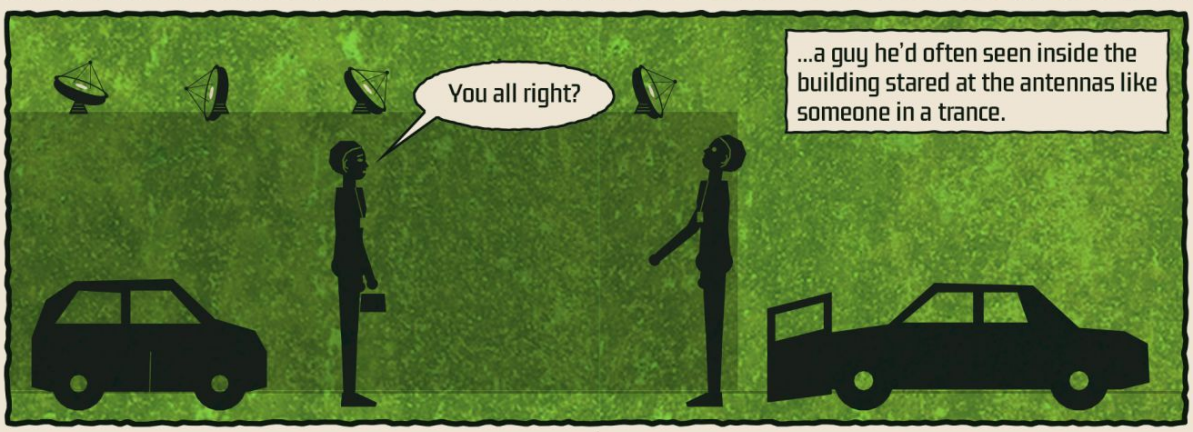

Any Given Day

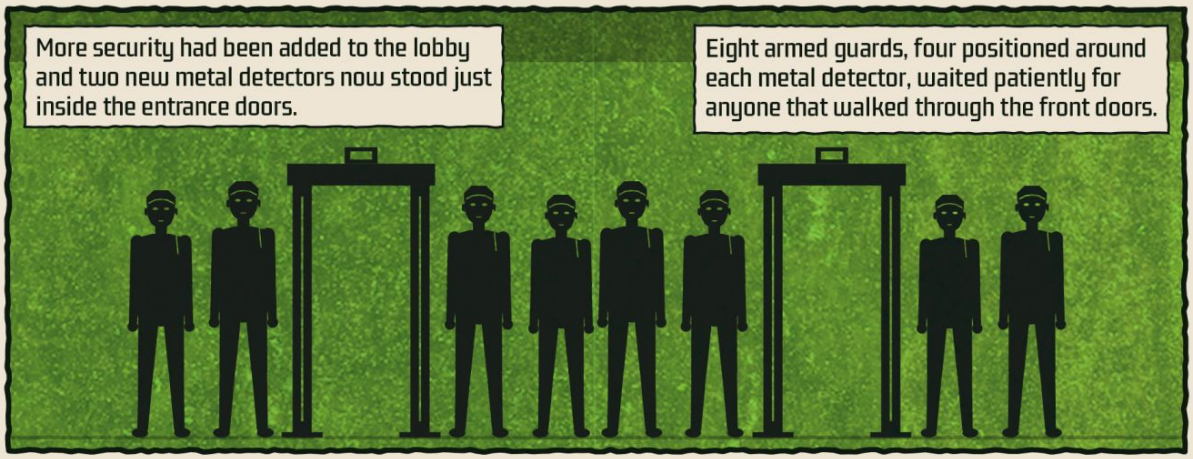

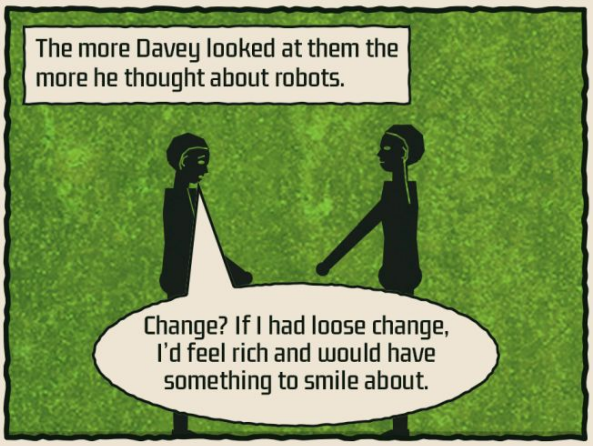

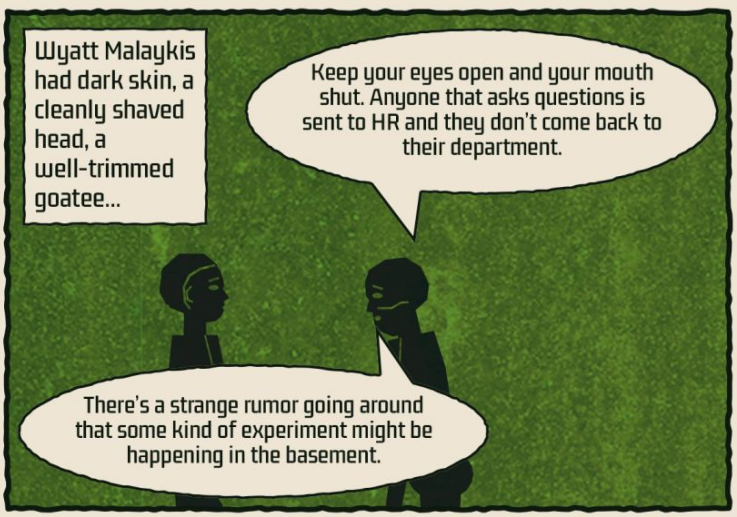

Don't go in there. Something bad is happening on this property. It started three weeks ago and has only gotten worse since.
What the hell's happening up there in your department? Employees have gone missing up there.
RAINEY DAVIS
The guy wore a lanyard with the name Rainey Davis on it.
What did you see?
No need to update me. I work in the mail room and just saw something on your floor that freaked me out.
A creature.
It moved on all fours. Its skin is all black, its eyes as red as the Devil's face!
Okayyyy.
You're not listening!
You go in there and you die! It's loose! Armed guards are chasing it.
WHAM!
Rainey fell back then jumped inside his car.
VRRRRMMM!
What the hell?

More security had been added to the lobby and two new metal detectors now stood just inside the entrance doors.
Eight armed guards, four positioned around each metal detector, waited patiently for anyone that walked through the front doors.

Something happened while I was gone?

The more Davey looked at them the more he thought about robots.
Change? If I had loose change, I'd feel rich and would have something to smile about.

The guard leaned his face eerily closer to Davey's lanyard.
An ear bud and cord hung from his ear.

Wyatt Malaykis had dark skin, a cleanly shaved head, a well-trimmed goatee...
Keep your eyes open and your mouth shut. Anyone that asks questions is sent to HR and they don't come back to their department.
There's a strange rumor going around that some kind of experiment might be happening in the basement.

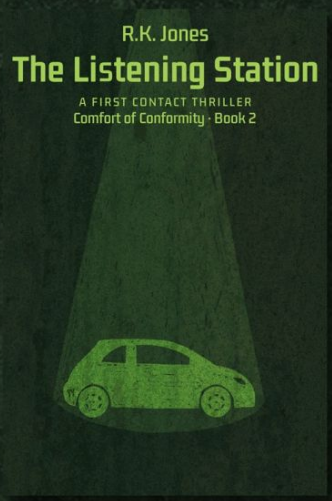

All eight guards were not only watching him, they were whispering into their shoulder mics like AIs in human form that had finally spotted their target.
